Los Angeles Embraces Frieze as Moment to Promote and Celebrate the Art Across the City

Frieze Los Angeles 2020 builds on the Success of Inaugural Year with Energetic Attendance and Exceptional Sales

Frieze Los Angeles ushered in its second edition as part of an expanded Frieze Week that celebrated Los Angeles' art community at Paramount Pictures Studios and throughout the city. Running from an invitation-only Opening Preview on Thursday, February 13 through Sunday, February 16, Frieze Los Angeles brought together galleries, institutions, artists and organizations to encourage and increase the possibilities of arts discovery and patronage.

Opening with major placements made on Thursday, February 13, sales remained strong throughout the week, with widespread reports of brisk sales, sold out booths and top collector attendance from Los Angeles, United States and from around the world. Launched in 2019, Frieze Los Angeles is supported by global lead partner Deutsche Bank for the second consecutive year.

The fair attracted 35,000 visitors during its four days at Paramount Pictures Studios, which featured 75 local and international galleries in addition to unique artist commissions as part of Frieze Projects and the Artist Street Fair on the Paramount Pictures Backlot.

Victoria Siddall, Global Director of Frieze Fairs, said, 'It has been a fantastic week at Frieze Los Angeles and I am thrilled with the positive response to the fair from everyone involved. We have seen strong results from galleries at every level, from emerging artists in Focus LA to multi-million dollar sales. The atmosphere has been electric both at the fair and across the city and we feel so honored that LA has truly embraced Frieze in just our second year here. We are already looking forward to 2021.'

Bettina Korek, Executive Director of Frieze Los Angeles, said, 'After just two years, it is already hard to imagine Los Angeles without an annual Frieze Week. Frieze Los Angeles is the heart of a moment that galvanizes creative communities across the city. While the exhibitors, artist-run spaces, nonprofit organizations and artists onsite at Paramount only scratch the surface of L.A.'s multifaceted cultural scene, new models we've tested this year like the Artist Street Fair have been a resounding success. We want fairgoers to know they do not need to be a collector to be an arts patron—patronage can be a part of everyone's life. My hope is that Frieze Los Angeles shines an international spotlight on L.A. while preserving the character of this city as one like none other.'

Frieze Los Angeles welcomed local and international museum and institutional groups, including American Friends of the Louvre, The Contemporary Austin, Dia Art Foundation, Garage Museum of Contemporary Art, Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Museu de Arte Moderna de São Paulo (MAM), Palm Springs Art Museum, San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA), Serpentine Galleries and Vincent Price Art Museum.

Joanne Heyler, Founding Director of The Broad, said, 'Frieze Los Angeles built intelligently on the buzz generated by its first edition with this year's substantial art at the fair and impressive programming all over the city that was compelling and imaginative. The Broad is proud to support Frieze Los Angeles as it quickly becomes a major international draw for collectors, curators, artists and a wide audience of art enthusiasts, further cementing L.A.'s status as a uniquely positioned arts capital.'

James Cuno, President and CEO of the J. Paul Getty Trust, said, 'By every measure, Frieze LA was a big success. Friends from across the country were here in great number, remarking on the quality and vitality of the fair. It was a big hit, and its popularity is a reflection of L.A.'s increasing stature as an arts destination.'

Hans Ulrich Obrist, Artistic Director of Serpentine Galleries, said, 'We need more conversations led by artists that reach beyond the art world. As the home of Hollywood, Los Angeles is a fitting laboratory for this evolution, and Frieze Los Angeles is a perfect nucleus. It was a pleasure to return to Paramount every day this week, not only to see art and talks and colleagues, but many artists drawn to the energy of the fair. It was a non-stop hub for encounters in L.A., which is always one of the most exciting cities for discoveries.'

Klaus Biesenbach, Director of the Museum of Contemporary Art Los Angeles, said, 'For the second time, Frieze brought so much excitement and energy to all the artists and art communities here in Los Angeles. It is wonderful to have guests witness the whole city so alive and celebrate together. As an institution that has played a major role in L.A.'s arts community for over 40 years, MOCA was proud to be a part of the week with our second annual brutally early event that Hans Ulrich Obrist and I hosted and to premiere Gerard & Kelly's State of. What a great week—I am already looking forward to next year! Frieze Week brings LA and the art world together at its best!'

Michael Govan, CEO and Director of Los Angeles County Museum of Art, said, 'As last year, and even more this year, under Bettina Korek's inclusive leadership, Frieze L.A. supported many amazing artists' projects, talks, and screenings—and inspired museums and galleries through L.A. to expand those offerings with their own programs. Thanks especially to Frieze, this weekend L.A. celebrated artists as well as their art.'

Gallery Response

Among the 75 participating galleries, both local and international galleries applauded the successes and pace of sales of the second edition of the fair.

Marc Glimcher, CEO and President, Pace Gallery commented 'In just two years, Frieze has very quickly become a crucial event on the art world calendar and a chance to spotlight LA. At the fair, we celebrated west coast artist James Turrell by collaborating on a presentation of his new works, and capitalized on the Frieze moment to highlight a fundraising drive for his magnum opus, Roden Crater. We were thrilled with the engagement we had from California-based collectors, which included placing several Turrell works in private collections and raising over $3 million in donations towards Roden Crater.'

Thaddaeus Ropac, Founder of Galerie Thaddaeus Ropac (London, Paris, Salzburg) said, 'We were very excited to be heading back to Los Angeles this year and found the fair's second iteration to have an extremely strong pull all round, with a growing number of serious collectors, curators and institutions in attendance and well considered, high quality presentations throughout. There was a fantastic atmosphere at the preview and the levels of engagement are noticeably high here, with some of the best collectors interested in important artists at the very top end of the market, resulting in significant sales from some of our key artists. It is fantastic to see the fair's strengthening position in the international art scene and we look forward to returning next year.'

Lisa Spellman, Owner and Director of 303 Gallery (New York), said, 'Frieze never disappoints! It's the happy fair with great curated projects, great vibes and great sales!'

Marc Payot, President Hauser & Wirth (London, New York, Somerset, Los Angeles, Zurich, Gstaad, Hong Kong, St. Moritz), said, 'Frieze LA is even more dynamic this year. We are thrilled to bring the work of such a highly inventive artist, Avery Singer, to a city which is so identified with experimentation and innovation. We've had a long relationship with LA and its art ecosystem, and are so proud to belong to the vibrant community in the city. In its second year, Frieze LA has claimed its place as a star in the art world firmament.'

Bo Young Song, Managing Director of Kukje Gallery (Seoul, Busan), said, 'It was another great year for us at Frieze L.A. Even though Frieze L.A. is still a very young fair, the team is incredibly professional and experienced, having already mounted numerous iterations of their London and New York editions. While maintaining its professional integrity, Frieze LA brings to the forefront a unique vibe that is unique to the west coast, and its venue within the Paramount Pictures Studio is unlike any other fair we have participated/visited. Frieze LA is a unique platform where the local and international galleries congregate in harmony, showcasing a greater diversity of contemporary art while maintaining Frieze's global standard. As this is the only fair our gallery is part of on the west coast, we were able to meet with new clients and art professionals who we otherwise might not encounter in Europe or other parts of the U.S.'

Glenn Scott Wright, Co-director of Victoria Miro (London), said, 'We have had a great response from the LA art community and international collectors alike-it has been a really strong fair for us.'

Fernando Mesta, Owner of Gaga (Mexico City, Los Angeles), said, 'As a Mexican / Los Angeleno gallery, Frieze proved itself to be a good occasion to introduce our program to our local collectors and the international audiences, the institutional attendance was great and we made great contacts, and we love Los Angeles.'

Casey Kaplan, Founder of Casey Kaplan Gallery (New York), said, 'We've had a very positive experience, both critically and acquisitions-wise. The community we've garnered here in LA is so supportive, and we are always glad to connect with longtime friends of the gallery plus enthusiastic new collectors. We look forward to returning and continuing the conversations we've begun.'

François Ghebaly, Owner of François Ghebaly, said, 'This has been one of the most successful weeks for art in Los Angeles since the gallery opened. Sayre's solo presentation at the fair and our gallery shows with Kathleen Ryan and Victoria Gitman received enthusiastic responses. We sold out on the opening days at both the fair and at the gallery.'

Kimberly Davis, Director of L.A. Louver (Los Angeles), said, 'It's been fantastic. We've made institutional sales along with ones to private foundations, and we've nearly sold out of everything.'

David Maupin, Co-founder of Lehmann Maupin (New York, Hong Kong, Seoul), said, 'Lehmann Maupin was pleased to participate in Frieze L.A. for the second year with a presentation of prestigious works by Liza Lou, Lee Bul, Liu Wei, and McArthur Binion. Frieze L.A. represents an exciting opportunity to show the many Los Angeles-based artists on our roster, such as Liza Lou, in their hometowns. Los Angeles has become one of the key centers of art and culture globally. It's crucial to be able to present work by our artists in this context. Historically Lehmann Maupin has often looked East, showing many Asian artists in the United States for the first time. Being able to bring the work of artists such as Liu Wei and Lee Bul westward is an important next step in our story.'

Olivia Barrett, Owner of Château Shatto (Los Angeles), said, 'Frieze's second edition has fulfilled the promise that the inaugural fair inspired. Sales have been brisk and there has been a depth to the conversations about our artists' practices and exhibition program, augmenting the foundations that were laid last year.'

Maureen Paley, Founder of Maureen Paley (London), remarked at the opening: 'Frieze has been very productive today. It brought people back to the gallery who we connected to in Los Angeles last year, as well as those that we know well from elsewhere. It was enormously rewarding to have placed a piece by Max Hooper Schneider together with a work by Gillian Wearing in the first minutes of the fair opening with collectors who really are dedicated not only to collecting work but also presenting it in very strong settings once collected. I am grateful to showcase a diverse program that is appreciated here.'

Philomene Magers, Co-owner, Sprüth Magers (Berlin, London, Los Angeles), said, 'We were really happy to be a part of Frieze L.A. again this year. L.A. has become a home for the gallery and continues to be for many of our artists, so to have Frieze as our local fair is hugely important to us. It's been amazing to see how much it has brought to the arts community. This week it drew in many international and US collectors and allowed us to make new connections. Within the first few hours of the preview day we placed several works in outstanding collections. Outside of our booth walls, the fair was also a platform in which our artists, including Barbara Kruger and Andrea Zittel, could present their projects to a wider audience.'

David Nemeroff, Owner of Night Gallery (Los Angeles), said, 'We were thrilled by the success of this year's Frieze LA. As with last year's inaugural fair, Frieze LA has demonstrated the strength of LA's art market and the incredible excitement surrounding the creative conversation in this city, especially as reflected among the LA galleries.'

Program

An immersive program of artworks, films and performances took over the Paramount backlot with Frieze Projects, curated by Rita Gonzalez (Terri and Michael Smooke Curator and Department Head of Contemporary Art, LACMA) and Pilar Tompkins Rivas (Director, Vincent Price Art Museum). Meanwhile, visibility and invisibility were key themes of the talks and films curated by Venus Lau (Director, K11 Art Foundation) at the Paramount Theatre as part of Frieze Film and Talks.

This year's fair also built upon Frieze's commitment to celebrating the city's art community through Frieze Week Los Angeles. Throughout the city, visitors and locals alike saw Barbara Kruger's expansive *Untitled (Questions) project that merged a public awareness campaign with site-specific artwork shown in varying mediums such as street banners, murals, billboards, and print and online advertisements.

Art for Justice, the Endeavor Foundation and Getty presented an evening reception and panel conversation on Monday, February 10 to launch Frieze Week, featuring key conversations on connecting the arts community with the broader possibilities of philanthropy. The evening saw the launch the Frieze Impact Prize, in partnership with the Art for Justice Fund, which will recognize and provide access and visibility to justice-involved artists. Selected through a national, open competition, the winner of the Frieze Impact Prize will be presented at Frieze New York 2020 and receive $25,000.

Curators Gonzalez and Tompkins Rivas also selected works for ‘Out of Bounds’, an exhibition presented by Frieze and the Endeavor Foundation, featuring work by artists in custody at the California State Prison in Lancaster, CA. An art studio at the facility was founded in 2009 by Christian Branscombe and is the only studio program of its kind in the state.
